

JUSTIN J. HARBERSON, MD

A native of Watertown, NY, Dr. Harberson joined Lancaster Gastroenterology, Inc., in July 2008. He attended Hamilton College and Temple University School of Medicine. He received his post-graduate training at Temple University Hospital where he completed a three-year fellowship in Gastroenterology. He received the Young Investigator Award in 2007 from the American Motility Society and the Resident of the Year Award in 2005.

He is Board Certified in Internal Medicine and is a member of the American College of Gastroenterology and the American Motility Society. He has conducted research on the histopathology of gastroparesis. He served on the Hospital Ethics Committee and the Performance Improvement Committee at Temple University Hospital. He is a noted lecturer on GI issues having recently spoken to the Lancaster Sertoma Club on the importance of colon cancer screening.